HADRIAN'S WALL | STANEGATE | VINDOLANDA

(Use the controls to navigate through the panorama.)

In the North East of England for the Binchester excavations – Vinovium.org.

Just to the north of our site.

Looking southwest, the Stanegate (Roman, named “stone road” in early medieval times) runs from the left of the picture, through the fort of Vindolanda and then straight up the rising ground beyond; Hadrian’s Wall is on the skyline running in from the right.

One of the few remaining Roman milestones still sits where the Stanegate enters the fort.
