

BELSAY

It looks like one of those wonderful winter late afternoons in the north east of England – sunlight after a morning of heavy rain.

Gilbert (Cockton) and Ros (Stansfield) have been out at Belsay, Northumberland [\[Link\]](#) – that extraordinary landscape of classical formalism and gothic romance.

Here's Gilbert's superb photo of the old border tower with its Jacobean extension, remodeled as a ruin when the new house was built.

(also – [\[Link\]](#))