TWELVE YEARS ON

For twelve years and more I have been visiting a tree, every month or six weeks. And taking photographs – every one quite different. [Link] [Link]

An apple tree in Anderson Valley in northern California, and a legacy of an old agricultural industry going back to the 1850s or 60s, now eclipsed by the grape.

This week I visited to find the old tree came down in the winds a few weeks ago.

Maybe 3500 photographs – and I seem to remember every one of those moments.

Gallery – [archaeographer]

